

C.J. ERION, PHD

CONSULTANT

Dr. C.J. Erion earned his doctorate from the University of Wyoming Experimental Psychology program, specializing in both social psychology as well as applied psychology and law. His research focused on jury decision-making, ingroup bias, third-party punishment, and punishment motives. He has published empirical studies in peer-reviewed journals and has presented his research at various conferences.

C.J. has a strong background in research methodology and statistical analysis, having minored in statistics and worked as a teaching assistant for graduate-level statistics courses. His experience as a Lab Manager, Researcher, and Instructor of Record further honed his skills in research design, data analysis, and effective communication of research-based findings.

In his role as a Consultant, C.J. applies both quantitative and qualitative methodologies to understand the thought processes of jurors at both the individual and group levels. By combining his knowledge of social psychology with his expertise in psychology and law, C.J. offers valuable insights as to why jurors reach specific verdicts, providing practically-meaningful recommendations for legal teams.

EDUCATION

- Ph.D. (Experimental Psychology); Social Psychology, Psychology and Law, Statistics Minor – University of Wyoming
- M.S. (Experimental Psychology) – University of Wyoming
- B.A. with Honors (Psychology); Magna Cum Laude – Point Loma Nazarene University

PRIOR EXPERIENCE

- Lab Manager, University of Wyoming
- Researcher, University of Wyoming Psychology and Law Lab
- Instructor of Record, University of Wyoming
- Statistics Graduate Teaching Assistant, University of Wyoming

PROFESSIONAL MEMBERSHIPS

- Society for Personality and Social Psychology

CONTACT INFORMATION

503.400.0301
cerion@edgellc.com

Mailing Address:
21175 Tomball Parkway #291
Houston, TX 77070